DESCRIBED BY GERMAN

Writhing wounded, is told in a letter received in Chicago. It was written at Fort Norde, Missy, in the Alsne district, by Dr. Fritz Seilder, a lieutenant in the German army, to his wife, who forwarded it to her brother, Dr. H. D. Wolff.

"It is getting worse," he wrote. "The last five days have been the most horrible I have gone through. Our brigade, the 12th and 57th Regiments with some artillery, has a position north of the Alsne river, which has been opposed for the last five days by a supposed for the last five days have been exposed for the last five days by a supposed for the last five days by a supposed for the last five days have been exposed for the last five days have been exposed for the last five days have been days by a supposed for the last five days by a supposed for the last five days have been exposed for the last five days have been exposed for the last five days have been days by a supposed for the last five days have been days five days have been days for the last five days have been days fi posed to the heaviest artillery fire. Hotels in Mexican Capital. om the Mexican Herald.

Hotel proprietors report that their busi ness continues to improve greatly and the prospects now are that it will still further improve during the next six months. With the entrance of the constitutionalist troops into the capital a large number of visitors arrived here, creating a demand for rooms at the city hotels which it was found difficult to fill for several days. Since that time, while the rush has not been so great, there has been a steady infix of visitors into the city and most of the hotels are now fairly well filled.

This has proved of benefit to all the hotel proprietors of the capital, who sufdefered greatly in loss of business during more than a year previously. This lack of business was caused mainly by the tying up of all railroads of the north on account of the revolution. Visitors to the city are registering at hotels from nearly every part of the United States, but there are no arrivals from Europe. Hotel keepers look forward to generally good business during the winter months and they hope that the long period of stagnation has passed away definitely.
